

WOMAN'S BODY HAD PETRIFIED.

Thirty Years in a Grave
Hasn't Changed Its Appearance.

The body of Mrs. Josephine Henshaw, reburied to-day in Woodlawn Cemetery, had changed to solid stone during the thirty years that it lay in a grave in the old churchyard of the Presbyterian Church on Samuel street, West Farms.

When Mrs. Henshaw died she weighed 150 pounds. The petrified body buried to-day in Woodlawn weighed fully 500 pounds and several men were required to handle it.

The widening of a street recently cut into the cemetery in West Farms and made necessary the removal of several bodies. Undertaker William Butler, of One Hundred and Seventy-seventh street and Boston avenue, was engaged to transfer the remains of Mrs. Henshaw to its new resting-place in Woodlawn. He and his workmen found that the coffin had rotted away and they were surprised to find that the body had changed but little in appearance. The features looked as if they were molded in clay. Half a dozen men were required to lift it to the surface.

As the heavy body was being placed on a plank it slipped, and the head broke off much as a piece of fragile statuary might be broken by careless handling. The entire body seemed to be as brittle as limestone.

WHITE BABY IN AFRICAN WILDS.

The Natives Travelled Miles to See Child of Brooklyn Woman.

Mrs. De Witt C. Snyder, who was formerly Miss Gertrude Wood, of No. 255 Broadway, Brooklyn, is at her old home, where she will try to recover from the effects of a fever contracted while doing missionary work 1,000 miles up the Congo River in the heart of Africa.

Mrs. Snyder was formerly an active worker in the Chatham Avenue Presbyterian Church, Brooklyn. She was married to Dr. Snyder about two years ago. The couple sailed for Africa in October, 1899. Mrs. Snyder was then in the bloom and beauty of her youth. She is now a wreck of her former self.

Mrs. Snyder traveled further up the Congo and Kasai rivers than any other white woman had ever gone. A baby girl was born to her in a village in the jungle. The little one attracted much attention, and the natives expressed unbounded wonder and admiration, and danced around the missionary, but in celebration of the birth of the white baby.

Then Mrs. Snyder's health failed and she started for home with her baby, leaving her husband behind. The baby died on board the ship when near Antwerp.

MAROONED MEN TO BE RESCUED.

Island Will Be Brought Back Home.

John Hill, John A. Bell, William A. Fumhrey and James A. Woodward, all of Baltimore, the four men who have been practically abandoned on Navassa Island in the West Indies since December, will be brought back at last.

Through a dispute between two partners controlling the phosphate deposits of the island the men were left without any means to return to the United States after they had gone there to work.

The partners have at last agreed to pay for their return, and the steamer Alps, which is due May 18, for Cape Haytien, will bring them on her return. She is due in New York June 12.

The men first went to the island in the employ of the Navassa Phosphate Company. When the company went into the hands of a receiver, the men were bought by John B. H. Jefferson and Capt. Wyatt Owen, of Baltimore. It was a dispute between Mr. Jefferson and Capt. Owen that resulted in the men being left to their own resources. At one time they had no food but what they could trap or shoot. They received supplies from a British warship and from the United States Government at different times. They have received no outside aid since March.

$30,000 Will Be Cut Off

the Price of Our Clothing Stock With One Sweep of the Pen.
And the entire $30,000 will be saved to those of our customers who accept this invitation to take advantage of the Year's Greatest Clothing Opportunity.

For 3 years past our greatest clothing sales were in June. Year after year, for some reason or other, manufacturers could not dispose of all the goods they made up for Spring trade, and by selling their stocks to us at great reductions enabled us to arrange these great clothing sales that were the talk of the country.

But This Year We Must Sell Our Own Clothing.

And the losses that last year fell upon other shoulders descend now, upon our own. We have had up to now not over 6 warm, sunny days—rain, rain, nothing but rain—and you can imagine what such weather conditions did to our clothing business. Mountains of unsold clothing—and what will we do with them? Carry them over to another season? Not much! We must sell them, and we must sell them now. After we're through with our own goods, we'll attend to overstocked manufacturers, but the clothing on hand must sell first. We rely upon the power of price to do the work, and we will take no chances. There will be no small, unimportant reductions. Every price will be cut deeply down to cost, and below cost, and in many cases to half price.

The Great Sale Starts To-Morrow; the Values Will Border on the Phenomenal.

It's the opportunity of the year—the greatest chance you can hope for this season—and, what is best, every single garment emanates from our own splendid stock, and there's not a finer collection in the country.
